Guidelines for Examination of Design Patent Applications For Computer-Generated Icons

Agency: Patent and Trademark Office, Commerce
Action: Notice
Summary: The Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) is publishing the final version of guidelines to be used by Office personnel in their review of design patent applications for computer-generated icons. Because these guidelines govern internal practices, they are exempt from notice and comment rulemaking under 5 U.S.C. 553(b)(A).
Effective Date: April 19, 1996.
For Further Information Contact: John Kittle by telephone at (703) 308-1495, by telefax at (703) 305-3600, by electronic mail through the INTERNET to "iconpat@uspto.gov," or by mail addressed to the Assistant Commissioner for Patents, Washington, D.C. 20231, Attn: John Kittle, Director, Group 1100/2900, Crystal Plaza 3, 8D19.

Supplementary Information:

I. Discussion of Public Comments

Comments were received by the PTO from eleven different individuals in response to the request for comments on the interim guidelines for examination of design patent applications for computer-generated icons published October 5, 1995 (60 FR 52170). All comments have been carefully considered.

Two comments suggested the adoption of the interim guidelines as proposed. However, a number of changes have been made to the interim guidelines in response to the other comments.

One comment suggested that computer-generated icons are not "ornamental" designs within the meaning of 35 U.S.C. 171 because they are dictated by purely functional considerations. These guidelines do not address the procedures to be used by PTO personnel in assessing design ornamentality. Compliance with the ornamentality requirement of 35 U.S.C. 171 will be addressed on a case-by-case basis pursuant to prevailing laws, rules, and regulations. In this regard, prevailing case law, such as Avia Group Int'l, Inc. v. L.A. Gear California, Inc., 853 F.2d 1557, 1563 (Fed. Cir. 1988), indicates that a distinction exists between the functionality of an article and the functionality of the design of the article that performs the function. Based on this distinction, the design of a computer-generated icon may not be dictated by the function associated with the computer-generated icon.

Many of the comments suggested that the PTO delete the requirement for a solid line depiction of the article of manufacture on the ground that it is not legally required. The PTO has adopted this suggestion. The final guidelines simply require a depiction of an article of manufacture in either solid or broken lines.

Two comments suggested that the PTO delete any requirement to depict an article of manufacture on the ground that indication of an article of manufacture in the title should be sufficient. This suggestion was not adopted. The depiction of an article of manufacture is necessary to ensure that any design patent covers more than mere abstract, two-dimensional, surface ornamentation.

One comment suggested that the language in the guidelines be amended to clarify that the guidelines satisfy the "design for an article of manufacture" requirement of 35 U.S.C. 171. This suggestion has not been followed. Computer-generated icons are designs within the meaning of 35 U.S.C. 171, but must be embodied in an article of manufacture to satisfy the statute. These guidelines are directed to determining whether the icon is embodied in an article of manufacture, not whether it is a design.

One comment suggested that the guidelines be amended to clarify that the drawing must contain a sufficient number of views to constitute a complete disclosure of the appearance of the article as required by 37 CFR 1.152. This suggestion was based on the language in the interim guidelines that a computer-generated icon may be embodied in a portion of computer screen, monitor, or other display panel. This suggestion has been adopted. See footnote 6.

One comment suggested that the interim guidelines be modified to require the depiction of a central processing unit (CPU). This suggestion has not been adopted. The dependence of a computer-generated icon on a CPU for its existence is not a reason for requiring depiction of a CPU.

One comment suggested deleting the rejection under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph for failure to depict the article of manufacture in solid lines. This suggestion has been adopted. Compliance with 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, will be addressed on a case-by-case basis under the usual laws, rules, and regulations applied to such questions.

One comment suggested that the guidelines include a statement that a portion of a computer screen can be represented by a breakout of a screen portion without screen borders, and some shade lines adjacent to the icon in the breakout portion to indicate a glass surface. The suggestion for a statement regarding a breakout portion was not specifically adopted. However, a statement was added to footnote 6 indicating that the design drawing must meet the requirements of 37 CFR 1.84 which provides for exploded, partial, and sectional views.

One comment suggested that the guidelines include a statement that the characteristic feature statement can be an appropriate invention title and that the title could be repeated as the characteristic feature statement. This suggestion has not been adopted. The characteristic feature statement should describe a particular feature of the design that is considered a feature of novelty or non-obviousness over the prior art. The guidelines already suggest appropriate titles.

One comment suggested that some other form of intellectual property protection would be a more appropriate method of protecting rights in computer-generated icons. The availability of other forms of protection is not grounds for denying design patent protection to computer-generated icons which meet the requirements of section 171.

One comment suggested that the interim guidelines may be construed as substantive rulemaking. The final guidelines have been amended to indicate that they govern the internal operations of the PTO. The guidelines have been developed to assist PTO personnel in their review of design patent applications covering computer-generated icons for compliance with the "article of manufacture" requirement of 35 U.S.C. 171.

II. Guidelines for Examination of Design Patent Applications for Computer-Generated Icons

The following guidelines have been developed to assist PTO personnel in determining whether design patent applications for computer-generated icons comply with the "article of manufacture" requirement of 35 U.S.C. 171.[1]

A. General Principle Governing Compliance with the "Article of Manufacture" Requirement

The PTO considers designs for computer-generated icons[2] embodied in articles of manufacture to be statutory subject matter eligible for design patent protection under section 171. Thus, if an application claims a computer-generated icon shown on a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or a portion thereof,[3] the claim complies with the "article of manufacture" requirement of section 171.[4]

B. Procedures for Evaluating Whether Design Patent Applications Drawn to Computer-Generated Icons Comply With the "Article of Manufacture" Requirement

PTO personnel shall adhere to the following procedures when reviewing design patent applications drawn to computer-generated icons for compliance with the "article of manufacture" requirement of section 171.

1. Read the entire disclosure to determine what the applicant claims as the design[5] and to determine whether the design is embodied in an article of manufacture. 37 CFR 1.71 and 1.152-54.

a. Review the drawing to determine whether a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or portion thereof, is shown. 37 CFR 1.152.[6]

b. Review the title to determine whether it clearly describes the claimed subject matter.[7] 37 CFR 1.153.

c. Review the specification to determine whether a characteristic feature statement is present. 37 CFR 1.71. If a characteristic feature statement is present, determine whether it describes the claimed subject matter as a computer-generated icon embodied in a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or portion thereof.[8]

2. If the drawing does not depict a computer-generated icon embodied in a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or a portion thereof, in either solid or broken lines, reject the claimed design under section 171 for failing to comply with the article of manufacture requirement.

a. If the disclosure as a whole does not suggest or describe the claimed subject matter as a computer-generated icon embodied in a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or portion thereof, indicate that: (i) the claim is fatally defective under section 171; and (ii) amendments to the written description, drawings and/or claim attempting to overcome the rejection will not be entered because they would lack a written descriptive basis under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, and would constitute new matter under 35 U.S.C. 132.

b. If the disclosure as a whole suggests or describes the claimed subject matter as a computer-generated icon embodied in a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or portion thereof; indicate that the drawing may be amended to overcome the rejection under section 171. Suggest amendments which would bring the claim into compliance with section 171.

3. Indicate all objections to the disclosure for failure to comply with the formal requirements of the Rules of Practice in Patent Cases. 37 CFR 1.71, 1.81-85, and 1.152-154. Suggest amendments which would bring the disclosure into compliance with the formal requirements of the Rules of Practice in Patent Cases.

4. Upon response by applicant:

a. Approve entry of any amendments which have support in the original disclosure; and

b. Review all arguments and the entire record, including any amendments, to determine whether the drawing, title, and specification clearly disclose a computer-generated icon embodied in a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or portion thereof.

5. If, by a preponderance of the evidence,[9] the applicant has established that the computer-generated icon is embodied in a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or portion thereof, withdraw the rejection under section 171.

III. Effect of the Guidelines on Pending Design Applications Drawn to Computer-Generated Icons

PTO personnel shall follow the procedures set forth in this Notice when examining design patent applications for computer-generated icons pending in the PTO as of the effective date of these Guidelines.

IV. Treatment of Type Fonts

Traditionally, type fonts have been generated by solid blocks from which each letter or symbol was produced. Consequently, the PTO has historically granted design patents drawn to type fonts. PTO personnel should not reject claims for type fonts under Section 171 for failure to comply with the "article of manufacture" requirement on the basis that more modern methods of typesetting, including computer-generation, do not require solid printing blocks.

V. Notes

1. Further procedures for search and examination of design patent applications to ensure compliance with all other conditions of patentability are found in the Manual of Patent Examining Procedure, Chapter 1500.

2. Computer-generated icons, such as full screen displays and individual icons, are two-dimensional images which alone are surface ornamentation. See, e.g., Ex parte Strijland, 26 USPQ2d 1259, 1262 (Bd. Pat App. & Int. 1992) (computer-generated icon alone is merely surface ornamentation).

3. Since a patentable "design is inseparable from the object to which it is applied and cannot exist alone merely as a scheme of surface ornamentation," a computer-generated icon must be embodied in a computer screen, monitor, other display panel, or portion thereof, to satisfy section 171. MPEP 1502; 1504.01.A.

4. "We do not see that the dependence of the existence of a design on something outside itself is a reason for holding it is not a design 'for an article of manufacture.'" In re Hruby, 153 USPQ 61, 66 (CCPA 1967) (design of water fountain patentable design for an article of manufacture). The dependence of a computer-generated icon on a central processing unit and computer program for its existence itself is not a reason for holding that the design is not for an article of manufacture.

5. Since the claim must be in formal terms to the design "as shown, or as shown and described," the drawing provides the best description of the claim. 37 CFR 1.153.

6. Although a computer-generated icon may be embodied in only a portion of a computer screen, monitor, or other display panel. the drawing "must contain a sufficient number of views to constitute a complete disclosure of the appearance of the article." 37 CFR 1.152. In addition, the drawing must comply with 37 CFR 1.84.

7. The following titles do not adequately describe a design for an article of manufacture under section 171: "computer icon;" or "icon." On the other hand, the following titles do adequately describe a design for an article of manufacture under section 171: "computer screen with an icon;" "display panel with a computer icon;" "portion of a computer screen with an icon image;" "portion of a display panel with a computer icon image;" or "portion of a monitor displayed with a computer icon image."

8. See McGrady v. Aspenglas Corp., 487 F. Supp. 859, 861, 208 USPQ 242, 244 (S.D.N.Y. 1980) (descriptive statement in design patent application narrows claim scope).

9. See In re Oetiker, 977 F.2d 1443, 1445, 24 USPQ2d 1443, 1444 (Fed. Cir. 1992) ("After evidence or argument is submitted by the applicant in response, patentability is determined on the totality of the record, by a preponderance of evidence with due consideration to persuasiveness of argument.").

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

On March 3, 1995, H.R. 1127, the "Medical Procedures Innovation and Affordability Act," was introduced. H.R. 1127 would exclude from patentability any technique, method, or process for performing a surgical or medical procedure, administering a surgical or medical therapy, or making a medical diagnosis. In this notice, the foregoing subject matter is referred to collectively as "therapeutic and diagnostic methods." The bill would, however, allow claims to such techniques, methods, or processes that are performed by or as a necessary component of a machine, manufacture, or composition of matter that is otherwise patentable. On October 19, 1995, the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. House of Representatives ("Congressional Hearing") held a hearing on H.R. 1127.

On October 18, 1995, S. 1334, the "Medical Procedures Innovation and Affordability Act", was introduced. While S. 1334 would not exclude subject matter from patentability, as would H.R. 1127, it would grant limited immunity from patent infringement to certain persons. S. 1334 provides that a patient, physician, or other licensed health care practitioner, or a health care entity with which a physician or licensed health care practitioner is professionally affiliated, would be free to use or induce others to use a patented technique, method, or process for performing a surgical or medical procedure, administering a surgical or medical therapy, or making a medical diagnosis. This immunity would not extend, however, to the "use of, or inducement to use, such a patented technique, method, or process by any person engaged in the commercial manufacture, sale, or offer for sale of a drug, medical device, process, or other product that is subject to regulation under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act or the Public Health Service Act."

The critics of the patenting and/or enforcement of surgical and medical procedure patents believe that "it is unethical for physicians to seek, secure or enforce patents on medical procedures." "Report 1 of the Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs (A-95), Patenting of Medical Procedures," p. 9, the American Medical Association (1995) ("AMA Report"). The bases for this belief are that such patents restrict access to patented procedures, increase costs of medical care, and interfere with patient confidentiality. See, AMA Report, pp. 3-6.

It is not the purpose of the PTO hearing to discuss the ethics of patenting therapeutic and diagnostic method patents. Nor is it the purpose of the hearing to consider economic analyses of patenting therapeutic and diagnostic method patents. Rather, the purpose of the hearing is to consider whether the problems identified by the proponents of H.R. 1127 and S. 1334, some of which are discussed above, can be solved administratively, rather than legislatively. In this regard, the AMA Report draws a distinction between inventions in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods that are "worthy" of patent protection and those that are not. The Report states, at p. 8, that > rigorous application of the standard [of obviousness] would not only remove the procedures which are currently causing an uproar in the medical community from patent protection but would ensure that procedures worthy of patent protection could come into existence. It seems reasonable to assert that generally the procedures which were non-obvious would be the ones that required additional incentives and economic investment.

The requirement of non-obviousness, along with novelty, is one of the basic requirements to be met prior to a patent being granted. The novelty requirement ensures that a patent is not granted when the claimed invention is identical to an invention found in the "prior art." The purpose of the obviousness standard is to ensure that an invention, even though novel, is not granted patent protection if it would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person of ordinary skill in the art or technology to which the invention pertains.

Accordingly, at the Congressional Hearing, the Administration offered to hold hearings at the PTO to determine the extent to which and how the problems presented by the patenting of therapeutic and diagnostic methods can be solved by changes in standards and practices within the PTO. In a letter from The Honorable Carlos J. Moorhead, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property, House Committee on the Judiciary, to PTO Commissioner Bruce Lehman, Chairman Moorhead requested the PTO to convene hearings "to determine whether the problems identified by the proponents of H.R. 1127 could be solved administratively, rather than legislatively." Chairman Moorhead suggested several areas of inquiry for such PTO hearings and those areas of inquiry are identified in the following section.

II. Issues for Public Comment

Interested members of the public are invited to testify and/or present written comments on issues they believe to be relevant to the discussion topics outlined below. Questions following each topic are included to identify specific issues upon which the PTO is interested in obtaining public input.

Information that is provided pursuant to this notice will be made part of a public record. In view of this, parties should not provide information that they do not wish to be publicly disclosed. Parties who would like to rely on confidential information to illustrate a point being made are requested to summarize or otherwise provide the information in a way that will permit its public disclosure. Individuals with questions regarding submission of such information may contact Richard Wilder at the numbers listed above for further information.

A. Application of the Standards of Patentability, PTO Resources, and Reexamination

Chairman Moorhead, in his letter to Commissioner Lehman, stated the following:

> (At the Congressional Hearing) there appeared to be a great deal of concern that the PTO has issued patents in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods that fail to meet current patentability standards. This concern implies a need to inquire into the standards applied by the PTO, including obviousness, in determining whether or not to issue a patent. It also implies a need to examine the resources available to the PTO to be used in the examination process, including the prior art available to examiners. It may also be worthwhile to consider whether changes to the patent reexamination process may be useful.

1. Application of Patentability Standards by the PTO

In the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods, as in any other technical field, the PTO applies the statutory standards for patentability, which include novelty, 35 U.S.C. 102, and non-obviousness, 35 U.S.C. 103. To receive a patent, an invention for which patent protection is sought must comply with all statutory requirements of patentability. The PTO examines each patent application on its own merits and does not apply per se rules regarding novelty, obviousness, or any other statutory requirement of patentability. Furthermore, the PTO strives to ensure that its examining practices reflect appropriate scientific and technological standards. The PTO thus seeks public input to help ensure that it is properly construing and applying the statutory requirements of patentability in the field of surgical and medical methods.

Are you aware of any problems related to the manner in which the requirements under 35 U.S.C. 102 and 103 are administered by the PTO for claims drawn to a therapeutic and diagnostic method? If so, please identify those problems with particularity, citing, if appropriate, specific situations or examples and providing steps that may be taken to solve the problems.

In responding to this question, you may wish to draw a distinction between problems caused by a lack of clarity of the legal standards governing 35 U.S.C. 102 and 103, as developed and interpreted by the Federal courts, and those caused by how those legal standards are applied by the PTO.

2. PTO Resources for the Search and Examination of Applications Directed to Therapeutic and Diagnostic Methods

In making a determination as to patentability under 35 U.S.C. 102 and 103, the examiner must compare the claimed invention with the prior art. The prior art can, inter alia, comprise knowledge, use, offer for sale, or a sale in the United States or U.S. or foreign patents or publications. Proponents of H.R. 1127 and S. 1334 argue that the PTO does not have access to all materials that comprise the prior art in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods. This is particularly so, they argue, in the case of prior uses of inventions that are not reported in journals, patents, or other publications. In this regard, testimony is solicited on the following points:

Do you believe that the prior art collection relating to therapeutic and diagnostic methods to which examiners in the PTO have access is deficient? If so, please suggest ways in which the prior art collection may be improved.

In responding to this question you may wish to draw a distinction between prior art that may not be included in a printed publication (including, for example, prior uses, including procedures performed in operating rooms and physicians' offices, prior knowledge, and prior sales) and prior art that is embodied in a printed publication. You may wish to comment on how the PTO can obtain access to obscure papers and other hard-to-obtain technical publications.

3. Reexamination of Patents in the Field of Therapeutic and Diagnostic methods

A person may conclude that a patent is invalid and want to challenge its validity on the basis of a "prior art" reference that was not considered by the PTO during the original examination. Proponents of H.R. 1127 and S. 1334 argue that it can be costly to challenge the validity of a patent in court. An alternative to challenging such a patent in court is to request that the patent be reexamined in the PTO on the basis of that newly discovered reference.
35 U.S.C. 301. The bases upon which reexamination may be sought and the degree of participation of a person seeking reexamination are currently quite limited. Proponents of H.R. 1127 and S. 1334 cite these limitations as dissuading third parties from seeking reexamination and relying on litigation instead when a patent they consider invalid is asserted against them.

Another bill before Congress, H.R. 1732, would provide a more effective reexamination procedure by permitting greater participation by reexamination requesters throughout a reexamination proceeding, with a right of appeal for the requester. The bill would also allow the PTO to consider matters under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, except for best mode affecting patent validity, in addition to those based on the prior art. Some persons practicing in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods suggest that the changes contemplated in H.R. 1732 are not sufficient. In particular, they suggest that the basis upon which reexamination may be requested should be expanded to include prior art consisting of unpublished prior use, including medical procedures performed in operating rooms and physicians' offices. This gives rise to the following question:

> Do you think the current reexamination statute requires modification to solve the concerns of persons practicing in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods beyond those contemplated in H.R. 1732? If so,
> (a) please identify with specificity the modifications deemed necessary to solve the concerns; and
> (b) explain the implications of such modifications, not only for patent owners, but for the PTO.

B. Publication of Patent Information

Chairman Moorhead, in his letter to Commissioner Lehman, stated the following:

> We also heard from witnesses that patent protection in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods exercises a chilling effect on the publication or dissemination of knowledge in the field. I believe it would be worthwhile at the hearings you have proposed to look into ways in which information contained in patent documents could be made more easily and widely available to the medical community. Perhaps a discussion on the role of early publication of patent applications would be useful here.

Proponents of H.R. 1127 and S. 1334 contend that patenting therapeutic and diagnostic methods may have a chilling effect on the development of new medical knowledge by creating an atmosphere of secrecy among physicians to protect their proprietary interests. One of the basic requirements of the patent law is that an applicant must disclose his or her invention in a manner sufficiently clear so that others skilled in the art are taught how to make and use it. Once issued, a patent is published, and, thus, the public can read the information and learn from it. Another bill before Congress, H.R. 1733, would improve the information-dissemination function of patent documents. H.R. 1733 would require the PTO to publish patent applications no later than 18 months after the earliest effective filing date claimed by the patent applicant.

1. Does the medical community use information in granted U.S. patents or published foreign applications or patents, in particular such information concerning therapeutic and diagnostic methods?

(a) If not, why not? If so, in what way is that information used?

(b) In either case, are there ways in which the dissemination of such information can be improved, both in terms of the form in which it is presented and its channels of distribution? For example, would the publication of patent applications as contemplated by H.R. 1733 improve the information-dissemination function of patent documents?

2. Would the absence of patent protection for inventions of therapeutic and diagnostic methods lead to a reduction in the dissemination of information in that field due to a desire to protect such inventions as trade secrets?

3. Does the availability of patent protection for inventions in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods inhibit the publication or dissemination of knowledge in the field? If so, in what way and to what extent?

C. Experimental Use

Chairman Moorhead, in his letter to Commissioner Lehman, stated the following:

The medical community has expressed concern that patent protection for therapeutic and diagnostic methods will have a chilling effect on the "peer review" of such procedures. Some of the proponents of H.R. 1127 have suggested that this concern may be overcome through a more expansive application of the "experimental use doctrine." An inquiry into this matter may be useful at the hearings that the Administration has proposed.

(NOTE: The PTO has solicited written comments on the experimental use defense to patent infringement. See, Public Hearings and Request for Comments on Economic Aspects of the U.S. Patent System, 58 FR 68394 (December 27, 1993); Cancellation of Public Hearings on Economic Aspects of the U.S. Patent System, 59 FR 1935 (January 12, 1994); and Notice of Public Hearings and Request for Comments on Patent Protection for Biotechnological Inventions, 59 FR 45267, (September 1, 1994).)

A concern among medical professionals is that the existence of patents on therapeutic and diagnostic methods has a chilling effect on the study of such procedures. In particular, there is concern that the need to seek and obtain a license to practice a patented procedure will restrict "peer review" whereby experimentation and testing of such procedures are carried out to assess their quality and safety. It has been suggested that some of these concerns could be avoided by expansion of the "experimental use doctrine." See, AMA Report, p. 5. This doctrine would exempt from infringement certain acts considered purely experimental, unrelated to any commercial use of the patented invention. Yet, other than limited provisions allowing for testing of patented pharmaceutical products for purposes of regulatory approval (e.g., § 271 (e)(1) of title 35, United States Code), existing law does not provide a general, statutory defense against a charge of infringement for experimental use of patented technology.

Despite this, the Federal courts have recognized a limited defense to a charge of patent infringement based on use of the patented technology for experimental purposes. This defense, referred to as the experimental use defense, has been raised infrequently, and when considered has been construed very narrowly. There are few cases elaborating the nature of the defense, primarily because patent rights are not frequently enforced against members of the public that use the patented technology for purely experimental purposes. In these cases, the courts have not recognized the defense where the accused infringer has engaged in use of the patented invention for purposes of commercially exploiting the invention, rather than for increasing his or her understanding of the invention. In cases in which the defense has been raised successfully, the experimental use in question was to ascertain how the invention functioned or for purely philosophical or academic reasons.

Proponents of H.R. 1127 and S. 1334 contend that the need for an experimental use exception in the field of therapeutic and diagnostic methods is greater than in other fields of technology, including the fields of pharmaceuticals or medical devices. They argue first that, while the Food and Drug Administration has responsibility for regulating pharmaceuticals or medical devices, peer review serves as the primary regulatory mechanism for therapeutic and diagnostic methods. Second, they argue that a patent on a surgical or medical procedure acts as a barrier to peer review that could lead to a decrease in the quality and safety of such procedures. Given these two postulates, proponents of H.R. 1127 and 1334 conclude that an expanded form of the experimental use doctrine is needed.

The foregoing discussion raises the following questions:

1. Does the grant of patent protection for therapeutic and diagnostic methods impose a "chilling" effect on the peer review of such procedures?

2. If the answer to question 1 is "yes," explain how such patents have such a "chilling" effect.

3. If the answer to question 1 is "yes," do you think modification of the present experimental use exception would reduce or eliminate such a "chilling" effect?

4. If the answer to question 3 is "yes," how should the experimental use exception be modified to reduce or eliminate such a "chilling" effect? In particular,

(a) What activities involving a patented invention should be exempted from infringement under the experimental use exception?

(b) Which entities should be able to take advantage of such an experimental use exception? That is, should it be limited to physicians or health care providers or should it extend to legal entities with which physicians or health care providers are affiliated?

(c) What gains or losses to levels of basic research, inventive activity, and investment in research-intensive industries, if any, would you expect to occur if the nature of the present experimental use defense to infringement was modified as you suggest?

D. Foreign and International Experience

Chairman Moorhead, in his letter to Commissioner Lehman, stated the following:

> As you know, many countries, including developed industrialized countries, exclude therapeutic and diagnostic methods from patentability. I think it would be useful to invite testimony on the way in which exceptions from patentability of therapeutic and diagnostic methods are provided for in the laws of other countries, the ways in which those exclusions are implemented, and the effect such exclusions have on the medical community and industry.

The proponents of H.R. 1127 and S. 1334 have argued that many countries exclude therapeutic and diagnostic methods from patent protection and that the United States should follow their lead and "harmonize" our law with theirs. Testimony is invited in this regard in response to the following questions:

1. Identify countries that exclude therapeutic and diagnostic methods from patentability. As to such exclusions, identify:

(a) the way in which exceptions from patentability of therapeutic and diagnostic methods are provided for in the laws of other countries (for example, whether they are specifically excluded or defined as not being industrially applicable);

(b) the ways in which those exclusions are implemented (for example, whether they are strictly or liberally construed by offices in those countries that grant patents);

(c) the effect such exclusions have on the medical community and industry in countries that maintain them;

(d) any international obligations that would prevent such countries from continuing such exclusions; and

(e) the rationale for providing such exclusions.

2. Identify countries that grant limited immunity from patent infringement to certain persons that practice therapeutic and diagnostic methods. As to such limited immunity, identify:

(a) the way in which such limited immunity is provided for in the laws of other countries (for example, whether it is part of such countries' patent law or general tort law);

(b) the ways in which such limited immunity is implemented in practice;

(c) the effect such limited immunity has on the medical community and industry in countries that provide for such immunity;

(d) any international obligations that would prevent such countries from continuing such limited immunity; and

(e) the rationale for providing such limited immunity from patent infringement.

III. Guidelines for Oral Testimony

Reference Collections of U.S. Patents and Trademarks Available for Public Use in Patent and Trademark Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent and Trademark Depository Libraries (PTDLs), receive patent and trademark information in various formats from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Many PTDLs have on file all full-text patents issued since 1790, trademarks published since 1872, and select collections of foreign patents. All PTDLs have both the patent and trademark sections of the Official Gazette of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. The full-text utility and design patents are distributed numerically on 16 mm microfilm, and plant patents on color microfiche. Patent and trademark search systems on CD-ROM (Compact Disc-Read Only) format are available at all PTDLs to increase utilization of and enhance access to the information found in patents and trademarks. It is through the CD-ROM systems that preliminary patent and trademark searches can be conducted through the numerically arranged collections.

All information is available for use by the public free of charge.

In addition, each PTDL offers reference publications which outline and provide access to the patent and trademark classification systems, as well as other documents and publications which supplement the basic search tools. PTDLs provide technical staff assistance in using all materials. Facilities for making paper copies of patent and trademark information are generally provided for a fee.

Since there are variations in the scope of patent and trademark collections among the PTDLs, and their hours of service to the public vary, anyone contemplating use of these collections at a particular library is urged to contact that library in advance about its collections, services, and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.

*A communication from the examiner should have been received in most applications filed prior to this date.

Patents will Expire as Follows:
(1) The term of any utility or plant patent that is in force on or results from an application filed before June 8, 1995 is the greater of the 20 year term provided in 35 U.S.C. 154(a)(2) or 17 years from grant subject to any terminal disclaimers. 35 U.S.C. 154(c)(1).
(2) All utility and plant patents granted on applications having an actual United States filing date on or after June 8, 1995 are granted for a term which begins on the date on which the patent is granted and ends 20 years from the date on which the application was filed in the United States. If the application contains a specific reference to an earlier application under 35 U.S.C. 120, 121 or 365(c), the patent term ends twenty years from that date on which the earliest application was filed. 35 U.S.C. 154(a)(2).
(3) All design patents are granted for a term of 14 years from the date of the grant.
However, the term of any patent may have been curtailed by disclaimer under the provisions of 35 U.S.C. 153, have lapsed due to failure to pay maintenance fees, or have been extended under the provisions of 35 U.S.C. 154, 155, or 156. Thus, if more reliable information is needed with respect to a particular patent, then the specific patent file should be reviewed to determine the actual date of patent expiration.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 2.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).
